

Evolution and thermal radiation areas of neutron star caps

M. Ruderman¹

¹Department of Physics, Columbia University, USA

ABSTRACT: The quantized vortices and flux-tubes in the cores of spinning-down and spinning-up neutron stars determines the evolution of the stars' surface magnetic fields. The resulting polar cap areas are consistent with the blackbody radiating areas of young spinning-down neutron stars and of spun-up millisecond pulsars.